Who should attend this symposium?

This University of Melbourne symposium is suitable for psychiatrists, geriatricians, neurologists, clinical psychologists, neuropsychologists, social workers, occupational therapists, nurses, physiotherapists, health administrators and trainees in all of the above disciplines, as well as those undertaking research on dementia and late-life psychiatric disorders. It should be of particular interest to those working in residential aged care facilities, aged psychiatric assessment and treatment teams and aged care assessment services. It has not been specifically designed for carers or members of the lay public, but they are welcome to register if they wish to do so.

All registrants will receive printed copies of the presenters' slides. Map and directions to the Venue will be sent on receipt of registration.

Each presenter will talk for approximately 25mins which will then be followed by 5 minutes of question time.
